FINAL DOOM OF CHICAGO

Bottom of Lake Michigan Is Rising and Will Submerge City

Scientists of late have joined in doleful chorus in regard to the doom of Chicago. They do not, like evangelists in the doldrums, assert that the city one day will be submerged because of its wickedness. Their observations are made in the most cold blooded manner possible and then conclusions are worked out with mathematical precision. And this is what they find:

The level of Lake Michigan has risen a foot within the last year and at this rate not more than ten years will clapse before all the low-lying sections of the city will be submerged. Professor Cox of the bureau of meterology of the national government has given special attention to the remarkable phenomenon presented by the gradual elevation of the lake and agrees with Prof. Maury of Columbia college and others that the lake region is tipping toward the Mississippi valley. He thinks, moreover, that if the process noted is not checked by some counter movement of nature-man of course being powerless—only a few years will elapse before all the present city of Chicago will be added to the floor of the lake that now washes its

How far eastward the tipping process extends, scientists have not definitely determined. If Lake Erie be included, the list of its waters westward will inevitably affect the flow at Niagara Falls, and Buffalo, if that city is soulless enough to exult in the menace that is over Chicago, will enjoy a short-lived triumph over its great shipping rival, since Lake Eric, being deprived of its source of supply would and in the course of natural events,

The situation is not a matter for huit is said, takes the matter philosophied tomorrow.

The tipping of the earth toward the Mississippi valley is a matter of tremendous import to a vast region out attempt to assess the agricultural, while talking in his sleep." commercial and industrial magnitude of such a disaster, it may be well to give ear to the facts as disclosed by them, at least as possibilities. Not an Up-to-Date Fairy.

The beautiful lady in the twentieth century fairy tale was about to be married. Adorned with jewels almost as dazzling and costly as those worn by the bride, the good fairy appeared. "I have come," he said, "to touch you with my magic wand, so that you will live happily ever after."

"It's awfully sweet of you," responded the bride, cordially; "but, don't you know, that wouldn't be at all fashionable now?"-Modern Soci-
